HUMPHREY RETIRES

Quartermaster General of Army Quits Service.

MAJ. ALESHIRE APPOINTED

Veteran Soldier Ends Military Career, at Own Request, with Rank of Major General—Will Probably Engage in Private Business—Successor Graduate of West Point.

Brigadier Gen. Charles F. Humphrey, Quartermaster General of the army, was retired yesterday at his own request with the rank of major general, and Maj. James B. Aleshire, who has been attached to the Quartermaster General's office, was appointed to succeed him. The retirement of Gen. Humphrey has been expected for several weeks. He timed his retirement to meet the convenience of the Quartermaster General's office, and to permit his successor to be selected and his appointment announced at the same time.

Gen. Humphrey is a seasoned soldier with a long and honorable record in the service, and he has a host of friends not limited to military circles. He will engage probably in private business after a period of rest.

Gen. Humphrey was born in New York September 2, 1844, and entered the service as a private in Company E, Fifth Artillery, in March, 1863. He was graduated from the Artillery School in 1874. At the beginning of the Spanish-American war he held the rank of lieutenant colonel and depot quartermaster. He served in the Spanish-American war with the rank of brigadier general of volunteers, and was chief quartermaster of the Sanitary campaign. His record in Cuba was especially creditable. Afterward he was promoted to the rank of major general, and served in that capacity throughout most of the long campaign. He has been Quartermaster General since April 12, 1903.

Rises from Ranks.

In his letter to Secretary Taft, asking for retirement, Gen. Humphrey says: "I have been in the military service continuously for more than forty-four years, and during that time I have held every grade of rank from that of private to that of brigadier general. Much of my service has been arduous, my services as Quartermaster General of the army since April 12, 1903, having been especially so. I should like, and feel that I am fairly entitled to, relief from the burden of official responsibility that I have borne for so many years. "Congress, largely on your recommendation, has been good enough to provide for my retirement with the rank of major general. In view of these facts, and because this is the beginning of a fiscal year and a favorable time for my successor to enter upon the discharge of his duties, I respectfully request that I be placed upon the retired list of the army.

"In making this application I desire to thank you, and through you the President, for the kindness and consideration that both of you have uniformly shown me, and to assure you both of the high regard and friendly feeling that I entertain for you."

Quarrel with Col. Roosevelt.

While engaged at Siboney as chief quartermaster of the Santiago expedition Gen. Humphrey had a quarrel with Col. Roosevelt, then commanding the Rough Rider Regiment. The ill-feeling then engendered had not been adjusted when Mr. Roosevelt became President, and Gen. Humphrey, then a colonel, was an applicant for the vacant office of Quartermaster General. Gen. Humphrey was serving at the time as chief quartermaster of the Philippines. He had already made a record, showing remarkable executive ability in the face of tremendous obstacles. His friends went to Mr. Roosevelt to urge his promotion, but found that the President was not responsive, or appeared not to be. This fact was communicated to Gen. Humphrey at Manila, and he sent a long message to Mr. Roosevelt, pointing out to his record and asking that it be examined. It was such a frank and manly statement that Mr. Roosevelt was impressed, and he found upon examination that to Gen. Humphrey much of the success of the several Philippine campaigns was due. Gen. Humphrey was appointed Quartermaster General, and served continuously in that office for four years. There are few men in the military service as popular as the retiring Quartermaster General. He is liked particularly by younger officers to whom he has shown many kindnesses and given encouragement. He was prominent in the organization of the Military Order of the Carabao, and is Paramount Carabao, or president, of the Washington Council.

Graduate of West Point.

Maj. James B. Aleshire, who succeeds Gen. Humphrey as Quartermaster General, is a native of Ohio and a graduate of West Point. He was born October 21, 1856; appointed a cadet in the Military Academy, June 14, 1875. His first service was in the First Cavalry, but he was appointed a captain and quartermaster February 2, 1891. He is the department's expert on horses.

Gen. Aleshire is appointed under the four years detail system.

tlement. The general board fixed upon twenty-four retirements, and applications were received for retirement from eight officers, thus leaving sixteen vacancies to be created. It was found, however, that only fifteen retirements could be made, and, therefore, one will be left over for next year.

Of the fifteen officers retired, five are captains, four commanders, four lieutenant commanders, and two lieutenants. The list has been forwarded to the President for his approval, and will not be announced until he has taken action, which is merely formal.
